

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A housing having a plastic window and a protective coating on the window permitting transmission of light of a wavelength of around 400 nanometers through the window portion while protecting the window portion from deterioration. The protective coating protects against ozone produced by the air ionization caused by received light. The package includes an optical detector, and the package and optical detector are part of an optical reader in an optical storage system.